DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to the following communications: application filed on October 21, 1999.

2. Claims 1-12 are pending. Claims 1, 6, 8, 9, 11 and 12 are independent claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 3 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per dependent claim 3, in line 3, "the client" lacks an antecedent basis.

As per independent claim 11, in line 12, "the data set may be dynamically retrieved" is indefinite, since the use of word "may be" makes the limitation vague as it is not clear whether or not the action has to occur.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jones, U.S. Pat. No. 6,517,353 B1, 2/03 in view of Realtor.com web site, http://web.archive.org/web/19990429142544/http://realtor.com (hereinafter "Realtor.com"), April 29, 1999, pp. 1-14 and Sutcliffe et al., U.S. Pat. No. 6,253,216 B1, 6/01.

It should be noted that the Realtor.com web site used here is an archived version of the website at www.realtor.com as it looked on April 29, 1999. The archive agent is called "archive.org" which archives the contents of the Internet continuously to preserve the history of Internet content. More information is available about the archival at www.archive.org.

As per independent claim 1, Jones teaches the following claimed steps of a method in a computer system for providing an electronic template for inputting and providing a virtual tour over a public communication network:

- making available to one or more affiliates via the public communication network, a virtual tour template on one or more memory areas, said virtual tour template providing a framework for affiliates to input photographs and a data set to create a virtual tour (col.3, lines 12-22, "... publishing tours which conform that format..."; col.21, lines 37, "The camera ...data is transmitted to the service bureau...");

- receiving from the affiliate via the public communications network, at least one movable photograph of part or all of the property, and storing the at least one movable photograph in one or more memory areas such that it is available to be dynamically retrieved by the virtual tour template and thereby included as part of the virtual tour (col.3, line 34, "A website is provided with a database having a plurality of pictorial tours" shows the storage in memory; col.21, lines 37+ shows the use of public network for upload.);
- receiving from the affiliate via the public communications network, the data set corresponding to the movable photograph, and storing the data set in the one or more memory areas such that it is available to be dynamically retrieved by the virtual tour template and thereby included as part of the virtual tour (col.3, lines 11-14 disclose the standard tour format, i.e., template, used for the virtual tours.); and
- making available to one or more clients via the public communications network, the virtual tour dynamically utilizing the at least one movable photograph and the data set in the virtual tour template (col.3, lines 12-22, "... publishing tours which conform that format...").

Furthermore, Jones discloses that the well known "IPIX (col.8, line 51)" technology is used for the virtual tours. However, Jones does not explicitly disclose that the virtual tour is a virtual tour of a real estate property. Nevertheless, Realtor.com, which is an Internet real estate marketing website, teaches that IPIX was employed to provide a real estate virtual tour (see page 10, last paragraph, "Who is iPIX?"). Thus, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have utilizes the Jones' virtual systems using IPIX to the Realtor.com, since Realtor.com explicitly taught the use of IPIX's technology for the real estate virtual tours and pointed out the advantages of using virtual tours for real estate marketing.

Application/Control Number: 09/425,833

Art Unit: 2178

Furthermore, Realtor.com taught the use of predefined templates to arrange the photos and virtual tours of a property (see Page 5). However, Realtor.com and Jones do not teach dynamically retrieving the movable photograph of the property by the virtual tour template and thereby included as part of the virtual tour. The missing feature is taught by the prior art of Sutcliffe. Sutcliffe teaches a web site creation system which allows the remote user to create a web page by uploading resources including visual images. In the prior art, Sutcliffe teaches selecting a template and using the template to unload the images remotely to create the layout of the page desired (col.9, lines 25-30). Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to have incorporated the Sutcliffe's use of template based image resource uploading into Jones and Realtor.com, since Realtor.com explicitly disclosed that the virtual web tours are based on specific layout templates (see page 5), and also Jones pointed out that specific virtual tour formats are used in the displays.

As per dependent claim 2, which depends on claim 1, Jones teaches that the virtual tour is made available via the public communications network, as a link from a website of the affiliate (since Jones teaches the use of a service bureau (col.3, line 3) and Realtor.com uses the IPIX service (page 10).).

Application/Control Number: 09/425,833

As per dependent claim 3, which depends on claim 1, Realtor.com teaches the step of returning the client viewing the virtual tour to the website of the affiliate upon conclusion of the virtual tour since Realtor.com provides a plurality of pages of content per real property (see page 8), which allows the user to returning to the previous page after the virtual tour is over.

As per dependent claim 4, which depends on claim 1, Realtor.com teaches

- receiving from the one or more affiliates via the public communications a network at least one still photograph of the real property unit, and storing the at least one still photograph in the one or more memory areas such that the still photograph is available to be included in the virtual tour (see page 8); and
- making available to one or more clients via the public communications network, the virtual tour which also dynamically includes the at least one still photograph in the virtual tour template as part of the virtual tour (see the figures on page 5).

As per dependent claim 5, which depends on claim 4, Jones teaches the step of providing a brochure template of the real property unit on the one or more memory areas, the brochure template utilizing the at least one still photograph and data from the first data set, to create an electronic real property unit brochure (see pages 5 and 8 for the example brochures).

Claims 6-9, 11 and 12 recite substantially similar limitations as those in claims 1-

Art Unit: 2178

5, and are similarly rejected under the same rationale.

As per dependent claim 10, although Jones and Realtor.com do not explicitly disclose displaying the data input template and the displaying of the photo input window being contained on the same screen display. Nevertheless, Sutcliffe teaches the use of a same screen display that shows both the template and the photo input window (see FIG.4A). Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to have incorporated Sutcliffe's teaching into Jones and Realtors, since a person of ordinary skill in the art would have appreciated the wysiwyg advantages of Sutcliffe.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
